A DECORATED GRAVE.

Was Horace Greeley's Brother Buried in Georgia?

Friends deplored his death and mourned.

It is generally known that the brother of the editor of the Cincinnati Commercial is buried in Burke county, in this State, not a great distance from Augusta. This is believed to be the case, however, by persons who live in the vicinity of the place. The story runs, that some time during the year 1825, a gentleman and lady traveling through Georgia in a private conveyance—for there were no railroads in those days—stopped at the house of Col. Angus H. Anderson, a wealthy planter of Burke county. They were Rev. Greenleaf Greeley and wife, and stated that they came from a town in the State of Maine. Mr. Greeley was then in the last stages of consumption, and was traveling through the South in the vain hope of recovering his health. Unwell when he stopped at Col. Anderson's, he was so ill the next day that he was unable to continue his journey. He lingered for some time in the house of the hospitable Southerner, receiving all the care and attention which would have been bestowed upon a member of the family, but finally died. In those days, we suppose, it would have been almost impossible to carry the deceased back to the North, and the body was buried in the private cemetery of the Anderson family. The widow returned to her relatives and friends in Maine. Subsequently Col. Anderson had brick-work built over the grave, and upon it placed a marble slab—similar to the slabs over his own relatives—with name, age and residence of the deceased written upon it. Time rolled on. Thirty years passed away, and Gen. Sherman began his celebrated march from Atlanta to the sea. His army passed through Burke county, and a portion of his forces encamped upon the Anderson plantation. The Federal bummers here, as every where else, were intent on plunder, and appropriated everything not too hot or too heavy to be carried. Believing that quantities of silver plate and other treasures had been hidden, they searched for them in every direction. As was often the case, they did not spare the dead, but rifled the family burying ground, prizing up and breaking the marble slab, etc. The Northern men's grave faced "Up" as any of the rest, and was desecrated in a shameful manner.

After the war was over, although like his countrymen, he found himself advanced, a son-in-law of Col. Anderson, and the graves of the family restored to their former condition, and likewise those of the Northern minister and his wife, who may have been buried and retain the inscription "Died for themselves." It is said that before his death the minister stated he was a brother of Horace Greeley, and it is the general belief that his statement was correct. Some may attempt to discredit the statement by asserting that Horace Greeley was born in New Hampshire and not in Maine. But this proves nothing, as every one knows who is acquainted with the migratory habits of the young New Englander. There is evidence, however, that we have sleeping in Burke a brother of the philosopher of the Tribune, who received hibernation from and was given Christian burial by a rough and ready man; that his tomb was rifled and despoiled by Federal soldiers, and restored by a relative of his host.

There are on exhibition in Chicago two extraordinary specimens of the human frame—a handsome, unformed boy, across whose back hangs an ox's head, quartered with leg and hoof contumacious, and an older with a solitary frontal pendant, besides the usual smaller teeth yoking skull; and a bull which in addition to the customary characteristics of his kind, actually gives milk. The bovine pair are a remarkable curiosity and are attracting considerable attention by reason of the singular anatomical anomalies which they constitute. Chicago Tribune.

CHURCH JUDGMENT, of New York, gives the opinion that the United States Statutes of 1866 and 1867, permitting a defendant, not a resident of the State as the plaintiff, to remove his case to any state of the union from a State to the United States Court, is unconstitutional.

TEN BOSTON AND OHIO midwest has decided to meet at the meeting of the Philadelphia and New York publican's convention, on Sept. 15th, with the privilege of a visit to Washington on the same ticket.

COT. AKADE, a wealthy merchant of Atlanta, remarked to the Georgia Free Association, recently convened in this city, that he owed about all he possessed to advertising. "Nothing," said he, "costs so little and pays so well as a liberal use of printer's ink."

The House tariff and tax bill as amended by the Senate Finance Committee, consolidates the whisky tax at seventy-five cents and the tobacco tax at twenty-four cents.

The Christian Association, opposed in secret societies, in session at Orlando, Fla., last week, nominated Charles E. Adams for President, and Gen. Charles H. Howard, of Illinois, for Vice President.

"We have the figures to show Grant's majority in 1872," says the Rochester "Advertiser." So have we—we ordered an extra number of 1000 for the purpose.

Deaths in Harrison county are dying off.

AN ingenious and philanthropic chemist in Georgia has invented a distilling apparatus complete enough to be kept on one's bedroom mantel-piece, and capable of producing some twenty-five bottles of whisky per diem. He is said to be already overwhelmed with orders from Maine and Massachusetts.

As the season is at hand when gardeners are much annoyed by the raids of poultry we would commend to them the following cogent advice:

"If your neighbor's hen lays, By straying across the way, Don't let your angry passion rise, For it will give place to lay."

Here is another quaint touch of campion poetry:

"Many had a little hunk, And as it took in water freely, When it grew, to be a sheep She called it 'Horus' Greeley.'

BARRIES county has decided by a majority of ninety-five to subscribe $300,000 to the capital stock of the Cumberland and Ohio Railroad.

The New York Commercial thinks that the "word of Burk's Hill" is knocked all amiss by the primping-hook of Chapman.

WARREN county has nearly doubled in both wealth and population since the Louisville & Nashville Railroad was built.

A FLASH of lightning exploded a gun in Wilmington, N. C., the other day.

A Paris darkey yell for "Horror's Greeley."
